

What we've been up to lately...

Recently, Jemima was asked (yet again!) to work on the look book for Indigo Joker's latest collection. You can check out this very creative local talent here: indigojoker.com including a fun blog. Indigo Joker is available in West End at Mona Lisa's on Boundary Street. Great job Jemima!

Jemima and Angela have also been busy working on a photoshoot for new Nelson Molloy collection. Nelson Molloy is an independent fashion label based in Brisbane, Australia. The label was created in 2002 by designers Maria Nelson (Australia) and David Molloy (New Zealand). The focus of the label is to create beautiful garments for women who are unique, clever and fashion forward. Each collection that the duo creates contain a series of pieces that can be worn in more ways than one - a skirt can double as a dress, a jacket can be worn in reverse or a signature wrap can be worn as many different garments - a dress, a top or even a light jacket.

Currently there are three Nelson Molloy stores in Brisbane, including the flagship store in the fashion precinct of Fortitude Valley, the design studio and store in West End and the stall at the South Bank Markets. They are also part of the coveted Young Designers Market held at the South Bank Markets. You can visit Nelson Molloy here: nelsonmolloy.com.au and/or follow them on twitter for up to 70% off your favourite pieces.
